Dan Chirlin is a veteran lawyer who regularly represents individuals and organizations in civil, criminal, and regulatory matters. He counsels clients in connection with complex business disputes over a wide range of matters, including breach of contract and business torts, securities actions, and employment disputes. He also has experience representing individuals and companies in internal investigations and in enforcement matters before the U.S. Department of Justice, district attorneys' offices, state attorneys general offices, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, FINRA, and other self-regulatory organizations and state agencies.

Dan also regularly advises and represents a professional NBA franchise on matters relating to ticketing, investigations, contract disputes, and regulatory matters.

Dan takes a hands-on approach with every matter, becoming deeply familiar with the facts and the needs of his clients. He believes that the practice of law is about—first and foremost—client service. Dan is known for his tenacious excavation of facts and his penchant for finding creative solutions to seemingly intractable problems. He practices law by the axiom that you never bring a problem to a client without likewise offering several possible solutions.

Dan often collaborates with his adversaries to reach equitable resolutions for his clients, but he is an equally aggressive litigator when required.

Dan has extensive experience in financial crimes compliance, serving on the executive team of a two-year monitorship of an international bank.

Dan also regularly contributes to several publications, including the Practising Law Institute and Law360. He is the author of chapters in treatises on bank monitorships and CFTC enforcement.

Before joining WMHW, Dan practiced in the litigation groups of two global law firms.
