Gordon Mehler focuses on federal criminal and civil litigation. He has over 40 years of experience as a lawyer that includes almost 14 years as a federal prosecutor and over twenty-five years in private practice.

As a defense lawyer, Gordon represented one of five defendants in the nearly six-month trial stemming from the Bernard Madoff securities fraud. He represented one of the original seven international soccer-related defendants extradited from Switzerland in the FIFA racketeering case. More recently, he obtained a no-prison sentence for a veterinarian indicted in a more than 30-defendant "racehorse doping" case, and he secured one of the first acquittals nationwide in a pandemic-challenged trial, with nearly all trial participants masked. Working pro bono for nearly two years, he and others obtained the release of two men wrongfully imprisoned for 13 years in the Palladium Murder case, later the subject of a two-hour Dateline NBC documentary.

As a prosecutor, Gordon served in Washington as a Department of Justice Deputy Assistant Attorney General during the Clinton administration. Prior to that assignment, he served as Chief of Special Prosecutions (now Public Integrity), one of the two white-collar crime sections in the United States Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of New York. He has tried over two dozen cases to verdict, including five lasting a month or longer, written many appeals, and was recognized for superior performance as a prosecutor by the Attorney General of the United States. On both sides, he has also handled many international cases. On the prosecution side, he served as his district's domestic terrorism coordinator, and prosecuted the last transatlantic airplane hijacking (from Germany). He also worked overseas as the first Resident American Criminal Justice Advisor to the Romanian government. On the defense side, he served as an expert witness on criminal procedure in the High Court of Hong Kong concerning American extradition proceedings from Canada against a Chinese executive. On and off the job, he has travelled to approximately 100 countries.

Gordon initially wrote Federal Criminal Practice: A Second Circuit Handbook (Lexis Nexis 24th ed. 2024, 1707 pages) with two colleagues: John Gleeson, a former federal district judge, and David James, a former chief appellate lawyer. Alicyn Cooley, another former Eastern District prosecutor, has since joined them. United States Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg called the work “tremendously valuable” in her foreword to the book, which is now widely used by the private bar, judges and prosecutors as a go-to reference in the field. He has also written articles on a variety of legal and non-legal topics for over two dozen periodicals, including The Atlantic and Newsweek, The New York Times and The Wall Street Journal, The American Lawyer and Annals of Internal Medicine. Finally, he has served on the boards of several non-profits, including the New York Council of Defense Lawyers and as board chair of Jacob Riis Neighborhood Settlement, one of New York’s oldest settlement houses dating to the late 19th century.
